

An anti-fascist makeout LARP for 2 queers

To begin, you must have 2 players. Discuss consent and any boundaries beforehand. No means No, and keep an open door. Play can be paused or ended at any time.

Begin on the opposite ends of an intimate space, like a couch or a bedroom. Look towards the other player and make as much eye contact as possible.

One player begins by stating a truth about how fascism, the world, and society discounts, disdains, and often criminalizes your queer love. The second player then responds "Fuck those guys" and moves towards the first player. Then the players switch roles. The players take turns back and forth, each one exposing a vulnerable fear and the other affirming it while moving towards them anyways.

Once you are next to the other, if you wish to kiss them, then state that "I feel safe here with you." If the other responds in kind, commence making out in defiance of the fash. If you do not wish to make out, you can also celebrate your love and warmth through high fives, fist pumps, and dancing.

Make sure you check in with the other player afterwards.
