

RAINBOW RUNAWAYS

A CALTROP CORE GAME

Foreword

This game features militarized police in the same vein of G.U.N. from Sonic Adventure 2. This game is written with the belief that police militarization, and US policing in general, is inherently destructive and harmful. People may have varying degrees of comfort with this subject matter presented, so I advise anyone playing with a group to discuss the topic beforehand, and assess people's level of comfort with the portrayal before playing a game. You can choose to narrate the events of the story with a tone as something cartoony and lighthearted like Wille Coyote, or as a grimdark race for survival.

Inspirations

Tabletop RPGs: Torches in the Dark by Michael Elliott, Blades in the Dark by John Harper, and Caltrop Core by Titanomachy

Video Games: Sonic Heroes, Sonic Adventure 2, Sonic Colors, Demon's Souls, Bug Fables

The Premise

You are an animal living in a human's world. The humans have found you, and the military will pursue you with every weapon, vehicle, and trap they have at their disposal. You've only got one option. RUN!

What you'll need

There are two modes of play for this game. Solo, or with a GM, if playing solo, you will need three d4s and a deck of cards, and something to write on. If playing with a GM, the GM will need a deck of cards and one d4, and the player or players will need three d4s each and something to write on.

Win Conditions

In order for your characters to escape the city, you need to fulfil one of the following win conditions.

Reach the Edge of the City: The military will not pursue past the city limits, to track your progress to the edge of the city. Draw a clock with 12 sections, for every Obstacle you roll a Absolute Failure or Absolute Success on, you can fill out one section on the clock.

The deck of cards runs out: The military's resources aren't infinite, smashing or otherwise avoiding enough Obstacles means they will lack the ability to threaten you for a while, letting you leave the city at your leisure.

Loss Conditions

Run Out of Health: The military will send Obstacles that directly harm you. If your Health reaches 0, you are either knocked unconscious or killed, and your escape attempt has failed.

Run Out of Stamina: Running out of Stamina won't outright make you fail, but to run out of Stamina makes your job of escaping all the harder. If your Stamina reaches -3, any additional Stamina loss is instead deducted from your Health.

Creating a character

Choose an animal species and name: Your species has no statistical benefits, but can help give you inspiration for how you want your character's stats to be allocated.

Example names: Honey the Badger, Arthur the Bear, Tiny the Chihuahua, Dankfire the Hedgehog.

Create a personality

How does your character feel about being pursued by armored vans and SWAT cars? Your character's personality might inform their abilities or tactics they use to make their escape. Are they dead set on a non-violent escape? Or is your character okay with breaking their way out with fists, claws, and teeth?

Choose your stats

Rainbow Runaways has three stats, Speed, Air, and Power. All of your stats start out with 1 point, and you have 3 additional points that you can allocate to any stat of your choice, a stat cannot exceed 3.

Speed

Your ability to move quickly, whether by running, swimming, or rolling around at the speed of sound. Characters with Speed Techniques specialize in reaching the edge of the city as fast as possible. Characters with Speed Techniques specialize in reaching the edge of the city as fast as possible.

Air

Your ability to jump, fly, or maneuver in the air. Characters with Air Techniques specialize in minimizing risk.

Power

How tough are you? Are you rougher than the rest of 'em? Characters with Power Techniques specialize in destroying Obstacles and wearing out the deck.

Choose Three Techniques

Your character has three unique skills, select which ones you'd like to have.

When rolling against an Obstacle, you can use one of the following techniques, you must meet the stat prerequisite to use the Technique, as well as meet the condition for the Technique as well. For example, your Speed stat must be at least 2, and you roll an Absolute Success to use the Boost Technique.

Speed Techniques

Boost

Condition: Absolute Success

Stat Prerequisite: 2 speed

You can expend 1 Stamina to mark off 1 notch on the progress clock.

Reduce stamina loss by 1.

Starting a Run

Now that your character is created, you're ready to start running.

When a card is drawn and the Obstacle is known, choose one of your stats, and roll a number of d4s equal to that stat, and take the highest result.

The Deck: When starting your run, shuffle the deck, cut the deck in half and then discard 5 cards, then reshuffle the remaining cards in the deck. If this deck runs out of cards, the character has succeeded the run.

Advantages and Disadvantages: Certain Obstacles have Advantages and Disadvantages. If the Advantage matches the stat declared, you can add one additional die, to a maximum of 3. If the Disadvantage matches the stat declared, you must subtract one additional die from the number rolled, to a minimum of 1.

Stamina: You start out a run with 5 Stamina, which you can use to perform Techniques. Your Stamina can go into the negative by spending it on Techniques or losing it to Obstacles. If your Stamina reaches -3, any additional Stamina loss is instead deducted from your Health. If you have negative stamina, you have a penalty to all rolls, -1 die at -1 Stamina, -2 dice at -2 stamina, and -3 dice at -3 Stamina

Health: You start out a run with 5 Health as well, which represents your ability to stay conscious during the run. If your Health reaches 0, you are either knocked unconscious or killed, and your escape attempt has failed.

Second Wind: Your character has the spirit of a hero within them, letting them keep going despite the odds.

Once per run, immediately after an Absolute Success. You can roll a d4, and regain Stamina equal to the roll, roll another d4, and regain Health equal the the roll.

Alternatively, you can roll 2d4, take the highest, and regain your choice of Health or Stamina
