we are shipwrights, we build and rebuild and fix and improve. in our ports, we can feel each other's work through the wood, the rigging, the soil, and rudder.

we may never meet another shipwright, but we know their touch, their thoughts.

even more, we shipwrights send messages through the planks and sails and bows, our ships are collections of inside jokes, secret messages, memories embedded.

how to play:

- take a piece of paper and add something to it.
  - like a short note, lyrics, a diary entry, a link to a song
  - like a sticker, collage, foil from a gum wrapper
  - like a stain, a raindrop, perfume
  - like a whole new color, cut out a portion and replace with something new. these rules

• on a section of the paper, add the date, the city, and your initials.
